START JEWISH FARM COOPERATIVES;
CELEBRATE JEWISH SCHOOL OPENING

Warsaw -- With the aid of the Jewish Cultural Union in Dzierzoniow, Lower Silesia, private Jewish farm owners in that area have formed an agricultural producers' cooperative which, immediately after this year's harvest, will start working on a collective basis. The farmers have pooled their entire livestock and agricultural machinery.

The organizers of the new producers' cooperative are known to be good agriculturists who are well liked by their Polish neighbors because of their diligence. A great many of these Polish farmers have been inspired by the initiative of the Jewish farmers to enter the cooperative.

The Jewish farmers of Bielawa also have requested aid to organize an agricultural producers' cooperative in their area. In connection with this request, Joseph Weinstein, a Jewish Bielawa farmer, voiced the general sentiment by asserting:

"We have seen the effect of collectivization in the USSR and the attainment of the producer cooperatives in Poland. We shall not lag behind the general efforts of our country to make progress on the road to socialism."

CEREMONIES TO MARK OPENING OF JEWISH SCHOOLS -- New York, Morning Freiheit,
3 Sep 51

Warsaw -- At the last meeting of the Council of the Jewish Cultural Union in Poland, it was decided to celebrate the forthcoming opening of the Jewish school year. The council decided to send a special letter to all local branch leaders of the Jewish Cultural Union, requesting them to have an impressive

Jewish school inaugural day celebration. The council further plans to ask the management of the government-controlled Jewish Theater to help make these ceremonies successful by sending groups of entertainers to participate in these affairs.

This year will mark the enrollment in these schools of Jewish children who were born in the new Poland, and all possible means are being taken to accelerate the publication of textbooks for the Jewish schools.
